

Bond Brook – Augusta Transmission Line Upgrade

Tentative Start: Fall or Early Winter 2023

Information for Hunters

Project Overview

As part of our commitment to provide safe, reliable service to all our customers, Central Maine Power Company (CMP) will be rebuilding an existing transmission line that runs between the Bond Brook Substation on Mount Vernon Road and another line in the Bond Brook Recreation Area in Augusta.

New poles will be installed, and trees will be cut within CMP's 100-foot right of way.

Construction is expected to begin in Fall or early Winter 2023 and during archery hunting season, which is September 9 through December 9, 2023.

Hunters and Construction Crew Safety

Safety is CMP's priority – yours and that of our workers. Please be mindful of your surroundings and do not come near the transmission line right of way (shown below).

In addition to hunter safety courses, the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife's Summary of Maine Hunting Laws provides information on rules, clothing requirements, identifying targets, and other topics.

Know Your Surroundings/Environment

Responsible, ethical, and safe hunters will always consider the environment where they are hunting. Make sure you identify your target and what is in front and beyond it. If your target is "sky lined" on a hill or power line, and you do not see what lies beyond, do not take the shot.

Right of Way Construction Activity and Clothing

Please be alert! Our project team members will be focused on the jobs they are doing and may not see you nearby.

Workers may be in the right of way in the months prior to construction to assess project needs, and during construction. They will be wearing visible and identifiable clothing that includes bright yellow-green or orange vests or jackets, and white or orange hard hats.

During construction, there will be noise, but it may not be constant. Even when there is no noise, our workers may be in the right of way.
